

PEANUT SUSTAINABILITY BEGINS WITH OUR INDUSTRY SUPPORTING ITS FARMERS TO BALANCE ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND ENVIRONMENTAL FACTORS.

That's why the peanut industry has united on Sustainable U.S. Peanuts - to support America's 7,000 peanut-farming families as they continue to do what they do best: provide a tasty and nutritious food that's healthy for the environment.

Why Does it Matter?

Not only are consumers demanding sustainable food production practices, but manufacturers, retailers and even our international trading partners are increasingly having the same expectations. Sustainable U.S. Peanuts is supporting America's peanut farmers with metrics on the most efficient use of on-farm resources, as well as encouraging farm operation sustainability practices that will help meet these expectations, lead to increased demand for peanuts and set the stage for long-term economic viability.

How does it work?

Growers enroll by completing an annual self-assessment (10-20 minutes) and field-level survey (20-30 minutes). Subsequent years' enrollment times are much faster after a grower's initial enrollment. We will randomly select a few growers for verifications (a Zoom meeting or farm visit).

What Does Success Look Like?

- Ensuring the long-term economic viability of growers.
- Satisfying the sustainability interests of buyers, consumers and trading partners.
- Increasing the demand for peanuts - both domestically and globally.

"In partnership with the American Peanut Council, we were proud to continue support of Sustainable U.S. Peanuts and its mission to help growers document and measure their environmental footprint and support continuous improvement."

- Brian Reed, The J.M. Smucker Company
